Title: All Metal Products' new big project: protecting employees from COVID-19

SYDNEY: St Marys-based metals manufacturer All Metal Products has announced that they have onboarded Rapid Test & Track, an innovative rapid antigen test compliance service founded this year. All Metal Products have implemented the program which monitors and screens employees for COVID-19, a necessary safeguard against the threat of variants and restrictions having consequences on the manufacturing industry.

All Metal Products, which employs 45 staff members at their St Marys facility, are now able to screen each employee at a designated time before they are due to begin their shift using the Rapid Test & Track management dashboard. Staff members are required to scan the QR code of their rapid antigen test using Rapid Test & Track's companion app which uploads the data showing the results of the test.

The companion app allows employees to easily connect with qualified telehealth professionals who can instruct users on the process of administering the test, which ensures the likelihood of an accurate result. With this system in place, the self test process is straightforward for employees to follow and get right every time.

Employing Rapid Test & Track's services has been a huge advantage for All Metal Products in the midst of the threat of COVID variants and restrictions. All Metal Products CFO, Andrew Lorking, commended how fast and simple it was to get the service up and running.

"The Rapid Test & Track system is excellent. It is easy to navigate and we have full access to the management dashboard that gives us visibility of all the test results that are uploaded. Our employees have been using the telehealth support to learn how to properly use the rapid antigen tests and they are all really confident with it now.

"It's a tough time for manufacturers across the board with staff shortages and navigating new regulations. A COVID outbreak in our business would be so detrimental, we had to find something that could prevent it. We contacted Rapid Test & Track and we were up and running within the hour."

All Metal Products has seen generations of success having been established in 1962, but are currently facing one of the toughest periods they've ever seen. They are leading the way for other manufacturers to implement a process that protects their employees, which accordingly protects their community and their business.
