

Aussie DJ, Kavorka says he is ‘back in the game’ after canceling shows during the pandemic

From a bedroom DJ to headlining Australia’s biggest nightclubs. Kavorka is on a rise.

Australian DJ Kavorka, 21, is quickly becoming a popular demand in the electronic dance scene. Pursuing his love of Melbourne Bounce, he is playing at sold out venues across Australia, with his own style and high energetic performances. Does his name ring a bell? ‘Watch out, you might get the Kavorka!’

Prior to the pandemic, Kavorka had been touring nationally and performing at sold out venues each week around Australia. It was then, when the pandemic laws were enforced in Melbourne, Australia, that Kavorka’s dreams of becoming a superstar DJ slowly haunted him.

The entertainment scene was one of many which suffered a great loss due to the spread of Covid-19. His 'Come With Me' single tour was sadly postponed twice until he could perform at venues again, in late 2021.

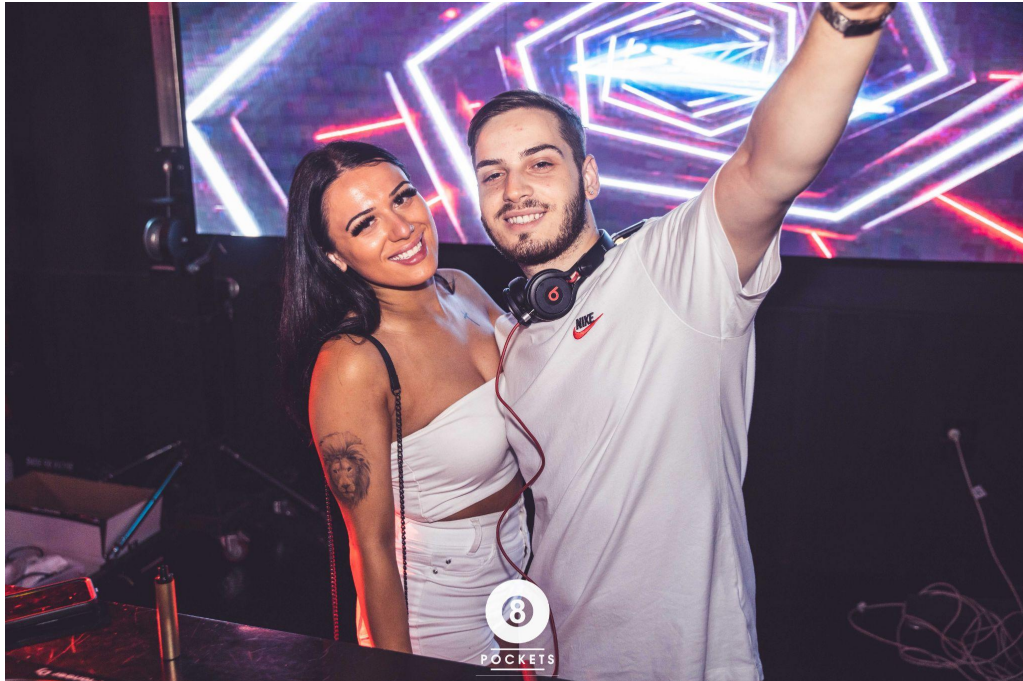

"It was a dark time for me but I had to stay positive and keep on the grind." He said.

To keep himself busy, Kavorka started his own radio podcast series, 'Kavorka Radio', and even live streamed these mixtapes where he could continue to interact with his fans and followers.

"I couldn't sit at home and do nothing , everyone was going through a hard time and I wanted to spread some positivity and good music." He said.

Since the restrictions in Australia have eased up, Kavorka is in the works of planning new tours and releases with his label management, That Sound Agency. His next release 'The Underground' is set to release in early February 2022. His unreleased single is an adaptation of Melbourne's underground sound and nightlife scene. Kavorka disclosed that he would be in the works of his first music video, taking place in late January 2022.

Today, Kavorka is taking some time off work to travel to the Gold Coast, and has shared his exotic holiday photos on social media. One picture shows himself standing outside of Gold Coast's iconic resort, Palazzo Versace.

"I'm giving myself a little break so when I come back to Melbourne, I'll be back in the game." He said.

With his gifted music talent and determination, it is no surprise that we will soon see Kavorka back again at dance floors around the world.