In today's society, addiction is an all-too-common struggle that affects millions of people around the world.

Polly Hazelton's 'Round 2000' addresses this issue head-on, exploring the detrimental impact addiction can have on our lives, relationships, and overall well-being.

Through her powerful lyrics and emotive vocals, Hazelton encourages listeners to break free from the cycle of addiction and embrace a more positive and fulfilling lifestyle, by firstly, acknowledging and coming to terms with the issues and by owning one's demons and setbacks, in order to welcome change.

With its raw and honest portrayal of addiction and its consequences, 'Round 2000' is a song that will resonate with teenagers and adults alike.

Hazelton's lyrics touch upon the loss of jobs, family, and friends that often accompanies addiction, as well as the feeling of powerlessness that can consume those struggling with this topic.

By sharing some of her own experiences and insights, including those she has crossed paths with, Polly aims to provide understanding to those who are suffering in silence, ensuring the listener knows that they or others in their immediate circle aren't alone, by putting herself in the driver's seat and firing ring, first-hand in this destructive world.

Accompanying the release of 'Round 2000' is a visually stunning music video, Written and Produced by Polly Hazelton and Directed and filmed by the incredibly talented Adam Jordan, that further enhances the message of the song.

The video, which contains explicit content, serves as a powerful visual representation of the destructive nature of addiction and the disappointment and lows that follow. While it all looks fun & almost harmless in the moment, the repercussions are detrimental.

The individual consumed by this world will feel trapped and powerless, however, should be reminded that freedom can and will be found through breaking free from addictions grip. The impact of addiction on our society is undeniable, with over 210 million people worldwide addicted to something as simple as social media alone.

While the content in Polly Hazelton's music video highlights substance addiction, there are countless other addictions that our communities are suffering from. For example, Nicotine, Weight loss/gain, gambling, caffeine, shopping, gaming, hoarding, food, working, personal obsessions – the list goes on.

Either yourself or someone you know is battling addiction and we need to come to terms with it, in order to generate a positive change.
